COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE - Substantial Changes

I. Summary:

CS/SB 542 provides that it is lawful for a child under 18 years of age to intercept and record an oral communication if the child has reasonable grounds to believe that recording the communication will capture a statement by another party to the communication that the other party intends to commit, is committing, or has committed an unlawful sexual act or an unlawful act of physical force or violence against the child. Therefore, the bill creates an exception to the general prohibition against interceptions of oral communications. Absent this exception, the recording is proscribed and is not admissible in evidence in a criminal proceeding.

II. Present Situation:

Definitions of Relevant Terms

Section 934.02(3), F.S., defines “intercept” as the aural or other acquisition of the contents of any wire, electronic, or oral communication through the use of any electronic, mechanical, or other device.

Section 934.02(2), F.S., defines “oral communication” as any oral communication uttered by a person exhibiting an expectation that such communication is not subject to interception under circumstances justifying such expectation and does not mean any public oral communication uttered at a public meeting or any electronic communication.

Interception of Oral Communications

Paragraphs (1)(a) and (4)(a) of s. 934.03, F.S., make it a third degree felony¹ to intentionally intercept an oral communication. The statute provides for a number of exceptions to this general prohibition.² For example, it is lawful under ss. 934.03-934.09, F.S.,³ for:

- An investigative or law enforcement officer or a person acting under the direction of an investigative or law enforcement officer to intercept an oral communication if such person is a party to the communication or one of the parties to the communication has given prior consent to the interception and the purpose of such interception is to obtain evidence of a criminal act;⁴ and
- A person to intercept an oral communication when all of the parties to the communication have given prior consent to such interception.⁵

The contents of an intercepted communication and evidence derived from the contents may not be received in evidence in court proceedings and other specified proceedings if the disclosure of the information would violate ch. 934, F.S. (i.e., creating a statutory exclusionary rule):

Whenever any wire or oral communication has been intercepted, no part of the contents of such communication and no evidence derived therefrom may be received in evidence in any trial, hearing, or other proceeding in or before any court, grand jury, department, officer, agency, regulatory body, legislative committee, or other authority of the state, or a political subdivision thereof, if the disclosure of that information would be in violation of this chapter. The prohibition of use as evidence provided in this section does not apply in cases of prosecution for criminal interception in violation of the provisions of this chapter.⁶

McDade v. State

In McDade v. State,⁷ the Florida Supreme Court (“Court”) held that it was an error to receive in evidence at McDade’s criminal trial recordings that his stepdaughter surreptitiously made when she was 16 years-old. The recordings, which recorded conversations between McDade and his stepdaughter in McDade’s bedroom, were introduced at McDade’s trial for various crimes involving sexual abuse of his stepdaughter. The recorded conversations included statements by McDade that supported his stepdaughter’s testimony at trial that McDade had sexually abused her. McDade had objected to their introduction.

¹ A third degree felony is punishable by up to 5 years in state prison, a fine of up to $5,000, or both. Sections 775.082 and 775.083, F.S. However, if total sentence points scored under the Criminal Punishment Code are 22 points or fewer, the court must impose a nonstate prison sanction, unless the court makes written findings that this sanction could present a danger to the public. Section 775.082(10), F.S.

² Section 934.02(2)(a)-(j), F.S.

³ These laws respectively relate to: interception and disclosure of wire, oral, and electronic communications; manufacture of communication-intercepting devices; confiscation of those devices; authorization of an interception; authorization for disclosure and use of an intercepted communication; and the procedure for interception.

⁴ Section 934.03(2)(c), F.S.

⁵ Section 934.03(2)(d), F.S.

⁶ Section 934.06, F.S.

⁷ 2014 WL 6977944 (Fla. 2014).

The question before the Court was whether a recording of solicitation and confirmation of child sexual abuse surreptitiously made by the child victim in the accused's bedroom falls within the proscription of ch. 934, F.S. The Court determined that this was a question of statutory interpretation. The Court found that none of the exceptions in s. 934.03, F.S., to the general prohibition in that statute against interception of oral communications called "for the interception of conversations based on one's status as the victim of a crime."⁸ Further, the Court determined that the facts regarding the conversations and the recording of those conversations indicated the recordings were prohibited and inadmissible under ch. 934, F.S.:

[U]nder the definition of oral communication provided by section 934.02(2), Florida Statutes (2010), McDade's conversations with his stepdaughter in his bedroom are oral communications. The facts related to the recorded conversations support the conclusion that McDade's statements were "uttered by a person exhibiting an expectation that [his] communication [was] not subject to interception" and that McDade made those statements "under circumstances justifying" his expectation that his statements would not be recorded. § 934.02(2), Fla. Stat. (2010). The recordings were made surreptitiously. McDade did not consent to the conversations being recorded, and none of the other exceptions listed in section 934.03(2) apply. The recordings, therefore, were prohibited. Because the recordings impermissibly intercepted oral communications, the recordings are inadmissible under section 934.06, Florida Statutes (2010).⁹

At the conclusion of its analysis, the Court stated:

It may well be that a compelling case can be made for an exception from chapter 934's statutory exclusionary rule for recordings that provide evidence of criminal activity -or at least certain types of criminal activities. But the adoption of such an exception is a matter for the Legislature. It is not within the province of the courts to create such an exception by ignoring the plain import of the statutory text.¹⁰

⁸ McDade, 2014 WL 697794 at *4.

⁹ McDade, 2014 WL 697794 at *5. The Court obtained jurisdiction when it agreed to consider a question (which the Court rephrased) that had been certified by the Second District Court of Appeal ("Second District") in McDade v. State, 114 So.2d 465 (Fla. 2d DCA 2013). In that case, the Second District rejected McDade's argument that the trial court should have suppressed the recordings under the exclusionary rule in s. 934.06, F.S. The Second District determined that the statutory proscription on recording oral communications only applied "where the person uttering the communication has a reasonable expectation of privacy under the circumstances," McDade, 114 So.2d at 470, and determined that McDade did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy. The Second District relied on a prior Florida Supreme Court case, State v. Inciarrano, 473 So.2d 1272 (Fla. 1985), which involved a victim recording. The Court rejected the Second District's application of Inciarrano. It found the circumstances in Inciarrano were "starkly different" from the circumstances in the case presented. McDade, 2014 WL 697794 at *5. Further, Inciarrano was "not based on a general rule that utterances associated with criminal activity are by virtue of that association necessarily uttered in circumstances that make unjustified any expectation that the utterances will not be intercepted" and could not "be used as a basis for the decision reached by the Second District, which turns on McDade's status as a person engaged in crimes involving the sexual abuse of child." McDade, 2014 WL 697794 at *6.

¹⁰ McDade, 2014 WL 697794 at *7.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill addresses the decision of the Florida Supreme Court in McDade v. State.¹¹ The bill creates a new exception in s. 934.03, F.S., to the general prohibition in that statute against interception of oral communications. The bill provides that it is lawful for a child under 18 years of age to intercept and record an oral communication if the child has reasonable grounds to believe that recording the communication will capture a statement by another party to the communication that the other party intends to commit, is committing, or has committed an unlawful sexual act or an unlawful act of physical force or violence against the child.

As a result of this exception, the recording will not be proscribed and the exclusionary rule in s. 934.06, F.S., will not prohibit the recording from being received in evidence in a criminal proceeding.

The bill takes effect on July 1, 2015.
