BILL: SB 1466

INTRODUCER: Senator Grall

SUBJECT: Residential Tenancies

DATE: January 12, 2024

REVISED: _____

I. Summary:

SB 1466 amends s. 83.43, F.S., to define the term “Florida banking institution” for purposes of the Florida Residential Landlord and Tenant Act. Specifically, the bill defines “Florida banking institution” to mean a bank, an industrial savings bank, a savings and loan association, or a trust company organized under the laws of this state, any other state, or by the U.S., and doing business in this state.

The effect of this change is to expressly permit landlords to comply with the Act by depositing their tenants’ security deposits in any qualifying bank in Florida, regardless of where the bank was chartered or is headquartered.

The bill takes effect July 1, 2024.

II. Present Situation:

Under the Florida Residential Landlord and Tenant Act (the Act),¹ if a tenant deposits with, or advances money to, the landlord as security for performance of the rental agreement, or advances rent to the landlord for other than the next immediate rental period, the landlord has the option of depositing the money in a separate, non-interest-bearing account in a “Florida banking institution” for the benefit of the tenant.² The Act, however, does not define what constitutes a Florida banking institution.

¹ Chapter 83, Part II, F.S. See s. 83.40, F.S. (providing the short title).

² Section 83.49(1)(a), F.S.

In at least one recent court filing alleging violations of the Act (the Palm Beach Court Case),³ the plaintiff relied upon a statutory definition for the term “Florida banking institution” that once existed in chapter 658, Florida Statutes,⁴ but was repealed over a decade ago.⁵

Specifically, the repealed statute defined “Florida banking institution” to mean “a bank whose home state is this state,”⁶ and defined “home state” to mean:

- With respect to a state bank, the state by which the bank is chartered.
- With respect to a national bank, the state in which the main office of the bank is located.
- With respect to a foreign bank, the state determined to be the home state of such foreign bank under 12 U.S.C. s. 3103(c).⁷

The plaintiff in the Palm Beach Case – a limited liability company that had been assigned the rights to a $500 deposit by the defendant landlord’s former tenants – cited to this definition and alleged that the defendant landlord had violated the Act by depositing the tenants’ security deposit with JPMorgan Chase Bank, which is not a Florida chartered bank nor headquartered in Florida.⁸ JPMorgan Chase, however, is the largest financial institution in the United States.⁹ As of September 30, 2023, JPMorgan Chase had $3.38 trillion in assets, 80 million customer accounts, and 4,700 branches.¹⁰ Then based upon this alleged violation, the plaintiff sought to recover its attorney fees and court costs from the defendant landlord as permitted under the Act.¹¹

Although the definition of “Florida banking institution” relied upon by the plaintiff in the Palm Beach Court Case has been repealed, a similar definition still exists in chapter 658, Florida Statutes.¹² This fact, combined with the fact that the Act does not define “Florida banking institution,” suggests that similar lawsuits seeking the recovery of attorney fees and court costs may be filed again in the future.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill amends s. 83.43, F.S., to define the term “Florida banking institution” for purposes of the Act. Specifically, the bill defines “Florida banking institution” to mean a bank, an industrial savings bank, a savings and loan association, or a trust company organized under the laws of this state, any other state, or by the U.S. and doing business in this state.

The effect of this change is to expressly permit landlords to comply with the Act by depositing their tenants' security deposits in any qualifying bank in Florida, regardless of where the bank was chartered or is headquartered.

The bill takes effect July 1, 2024.

IV. Constitutional Issues:

A. Municipality/County Mandates Restrictions:

None.

B. Public Records/Open Meetings Issues:

None.

C. Trust Funds Restrictions:

None.

D. State Tax or Fee Increases:

None.

E. Other Constitutional Issues:

None.

V. Fiscal Impact Statement:

A. Tax/Fee Issues:

None.

B. Private Sector Impact:

Because the bill expressly permits landlords to comply with the Act by depositing their tenants' security deposits in any qualifying bank in Florida, regardless of where the bank was chartered or is headquartered, fewer lawsuits alleging "Florida banking institution" violations of the Act will be filed, reducing the costs to both plaintiffs and defendants in landlord-tenant disputes. Additionally, banking institutions that are not chartered or headquartered in Florida may benefit from receiving additional security deposits.

C. Government Sector Impact:

Because the bill expressly permits landlords to comply with the Act by depositing their tenants' security deposits in any qualifying bank in Florida, regardless of where the bank was chartered or is headquartered, fewer lawsuits alleging "Florida banking institution" violations of the Act will be filed. As a result, the bill is likely to reduce the caseload burden on small claims, county, and circuit courts.

VI. Technical Deficiencies:

None.

VII. Related Issues:

None.

VIII. Statutes Affected:

This bill substantially amends the following sections of the Florida Statutes: 83.43, 83.491, and 553.895.
