COMPANION BILL(S): SB 564 (s)

I. SUMMARY:

CS/HB 3409 amends statutes controlling community college Direct Service Organizations (DSO) and statewide community college DSO, including the governance, financing and reporting requirements these organizations. It provides for the appointments by the community college board of trustees to the of community college DSO board of directors and executive committee, and provides for the appointment of the community college president to the board and committee. It also prohibits the transfer of public funds to a DSO for the guarantee or repayment of debt, requires that DSO submit to the State Board of Community Colleges Internal Revenue Service forms relating its tax-exempt status, and specifies that a community college DSO may, at the request of the community college board of trustees, provide residency opportunities on or near campus.

It provides that the chairperson of the State Board of Community Colleges shall appoint a representative to and also serve on the board of directors and executive committee of any statewide community college DSO. It also provides for the State Board of Community Colleges to approve agreements between a state-wide DSO and another DSO or a center of technology, restricts the use of public funds by a statewide DSO in maintaining an interest in a facility, and requires that DSO submit to the State Board of Community Colleges Internal Revenue Service forms relating its tax-exempt status.

There may be an indeterminate, though insubstantial, fiscal impact related to increased reporting requirements.

II. SUBSTANTIVE RESEARCH:

A. PRESENT SITUATION

COMMUNITY COLLEGE PRESIDENTS

Section 240.311, F.S., requires community college boards of trustees to evaluate the presidents "periodically."

ACCOUNTABILITY

Section 240.324, F.S., requires the community college system to develop and implement a plan to assure accountability and efficiency of instruction and administration. The plan does not include all the criteria used for accreditation, although many members of community college boards of trustees report that the accreditation process helps them understand community college operations.

CENTERS OF TECHNOLOGY INNOVATION

Centers of technology innovation are authorized by s. 240.3335, F.S., for public community colleges as designated by the State Board of Community Colleges. A center may be a single college or a consortium of colleges that is authorized to improve conditions in such areas as curriculum, faculty, research, testing, technology transfer, instructional equipment, or industrial partnership. A center may provide instruction, including instruction of secondary school students and teachers. It must have a board of directors which has authority to acquire, lease, and sublease property.

DIRECT SUPPORT ORGANIZATIONS

Direct-support organizations (DSO) are private, not-for-profit corporations that function on behalf of a government entity, such as a community college or university. A DSO generally raises money or other resources on behalf of the entity with which it is affiliated. DSO funds and resources do not go through a governmental appropriation process and are not subject to state budgeting or financial management laws.

Although DSO have existed for some time in private educational entities, there has been a dramatic increase over the past twenty years in the number and resources of DSO associated with both community colleges and universities in Florida and other states. Factors which contributed to an increase in numbers included control of funds, loss of state revenues, protection of the privacy of donors, and flexibility in the use of funds controlled by a direct-support organization. As foundations become more prevalent and assume more importance in the support of public higher education institutions, the promulgation of clear state policies and guidelines become imperative.

During the 1994 interim, the House Committee on Higher Education studied issues associated with DSO in postsecondary education. The purpose of the study was to determine the degree to which postsecondary education governing boards (i.e., the Board of Regents of the State University System, and the local boards of trustees of the community colleges) have retained adequate oversight of DSO associated with their institutions comparable to the boards' oversight of the other operations of the community colleges and universities. Final recommendations of the report included:

- ▶ Budget and expenditure reports should be detailed, formally adopted and closely monitored by governing boards.
- ▶ Public records provisions should be clarified.
- ▶ Formal policies should be adopted by governing boards for fundraising activities.
- ▶ System-wide guidelines should be adopted related to:
 - formats for financial audit and budget and expenditure reports;
 - approval and reporting of employee compensation;
 - avoiding conflict of interest;
 - restrictions against gratuitous gifts;
 - approval and reporting of employee salary supplements; and
 - approval and reporting of athletic program support provided by the DSO.

Florida law requires a DSO to be annually audited by an independent auditor. Although general accounting principles are followed in each audit, varying reporting styles make System-wide comparisons difficult.

In order to receive non-profit status, a DSO is required to submit to the federal government an application describing both general and specific organizational and operational information (Internal Revenue Service, Application for Recognition of Exemption form, Form 1023). Standardized information on the form requires a complete disclosure of all planned fundraising activities as well as statements of mission, purpose, disposition of funds and revenue, and a variety of other compliance issues.

Once recognized as a non-profit entity, each DSO must then annually submit to the federal government its budget and expenditure information (Internal Revenue Service, Return of Organization Exempt From Income Tax form, Form 990). Standardized information on the form includes: itemized and specific assistance given to individuals; benefits paid to or for members; compensation of officers and directors; other salaries and wages; fundraising expenses; accounting fees, legal fees and other fees; office and operating expenses; travel, conference, convention and meeting expenses; depreciation; interest income and expenses; contributions, gifts, grants and other sources of revenue; balance sheet; statement of the accomplishments of the DSO to include the expenditures associated with each accomplishment which must balance to the DSO's total expenditures; liabilities; gain or loss on sale of investments; listing of investments and securities held by the DSO; expenditures for political purposes; analysis of income producing activities; and financial benefits to board members.

Of the three reports, only the statutorily-required annual audit is required to be submitted to the governing board of the institution supported by the DSO (i.e., board of trustees for community colleges and Board of Regents for universities.) The Internal Revenue Service requires that Form 1023 and Form 990 be made available for public inspection.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGE:

COMMUNITY COLLEGE PRESIDENTS

The bill would change the frequency of evaluation of community college presidents from a periodic to an annual basis. It would not effect the substance of the rulemaking authorized under the section

ACCOUNTABILITY

The bill would require that the institutional assessment efforts related to the criteria for accreditation of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools be addressed in the accountability plan to improve and evaluate the instructional and effectiveness and efficiency of the community college system. This could provide better information for the accountability process and align the accountability process with accreditation criteria.

CENTERS OF TECHNOLOGY INNOVATION

Centers of technology innovation boards of directors would be prohibited from acquiring, leasing, or subleasing property. A community college board of trustees would be required to approve any transaction or agreement between two DSOs or between a DSO and a center of technology innovation. Likewise, the State Board of Community Colleges would be required to approve any transaction between a statewide DSO and a center of technology innovation. These provisions would potentially increase accountability through the added oversight of centers of technology innovation by the appropriate board.

DIRECT SUPPORT ORGANIZATIONS

A DSO would submit to its governing board (i.e., board of trustees for community colleges and Board of Regents for universities) its application for non-profit status (Form 1023) and its annual tax return (Form 990). Submission of the plans to the governing boards would then make them public records for the open-record purposes of Chapter 120. A community college DSO would also submit its annual audit to the State Board of Community Colleges.

The bill would change the membership of DSO boards of directors to include the community college president or designee and a member appointed by the chairperson of the community college board of trustees. This provision would codify current practice.

These provisions would potentially increase accountability of the DSO by increasing reporting requirements, increasing public inspection of reports, and requiring the participation of the community college president on the DSO board.

The bill would make it illegal for a community college to transfer or pledge public funds or property to a DSO. This provision would prohibit community colleges from guaranteeing bond issues used to construct student housing. It would not affect legal obligations for bonds already issued, but would prohibit community colleges from entering into them in the future.

Limiting DSO to "private funds" only could eliminate opportunities to use donations by cities, counties, or the federal government as matching funds. These other governmental revenues represent valuable sources of money and limiting their use would restrict the abilities of community colleges to be successful in raising funds.
