I. SUMMARY:

CS/HB 1465 implements the recent amendment to Article VI, Section 5 of the Florida Constitution by allowing all voters, regardless of party affiliation, to vote in a primary election when all candidates have the same party affiliation and there will be no opposition in the ensuing general election.

Although the fiscal impact of this bill has not yet been determined, it does not appear to have a fiscal impact on state or local governments.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

Currently, Florida law provides for a closed primary system in which votes are cast by voters having the same party affiliation as the candidate. A voter is prohibited from voting in a primary election for any candidate running for nomination from a political party other than the party in which that voter is registered. Therefore, in instances where only one party has candidates who have qualified for an office and there is no general election opposition, only the voters in that political party determine the eventual officeholder. Florida is one of 18 states with a completely closed primary system.

However, effective January 5, 1999, Article VI, Section 5(b), Florida Constitution, provides:

If all candidates for an office have the same party affiliation and the winner will have no opposition in the general election, all qualified electors, regardless of party affiliation, may vote in the primary elections for that office.

Thus, Article VI, Section 5(b), Florida Constitution, effectively creates an "open" primary election.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

CS/HB 1465 implements the necessary changes to the Florida Election Code dictated by the recent amendment to the Florida Constitution. If all candidates for an office are seeking the nomination of the same political party and there will be no opposition in the general election, all voters will be allowed to vote for that office in the first primary election and, if necessary, the general election. (For purposes of this bill, a write-in candidate is considered opposition.)

When an open primary is held, those offices affected will be grouped together and placed on the ballot under the separate heading of "Universal Primary" or, alternatively, on a separate ballot. In cases in which no candidate has received a majority of votes cast, the two candidates receiving the highest number of votes will be placed on the general election ballot.

This bill takes effect upon becoming a law.
