B. PRESENT SITUATION:

The Department of Veterans Affairs reports that 405,399 men and women were killed, and 671,846 were wounded, as a result of World War II. Among those casualties, an estimated 463 were Florida residents. Today, World War II veterans are all over 70 years old with a national mortality rate of approximately 30,000 per month.

According to information provided by the 1980 and 1990 Census, out of all veterans who relocated to another state during that decade, 47% moved to Florida. In fact, the rate of net growth in Florida's veteran population during the last two decades has exceeded 102 veterans per day. According to the Florida Department of Veterans Affairs, out of the approximately 1.7 million veterans residing in Florida on July 1, 1997, 559,500 were World War II veterans.

To honor those who served in World War II, the U.S. Congress introduced in 1987, and then subsequently passed in 1993, a bill, Public Law 103-32, authorizing the construction of a national World War II memorial on federal land in the District of Columbia. The memorial is funded entirely from private donations and is estimated to cost $100 million. To date, approximately $70 million has been raised through corporate and foundation giving, various veterans groups, individual donations, and appropriations from the states. Twenty-three states have provided funding for the memorial, most using the "$1 for every man and woman who served in the war" formula, although some have provided more.
