I. SUMMARY:

In 1993, Governor Lawton Chiles signed an executive order creating the Florida Commission on Community Service, as authorized by the federal National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993. In 1994, the Florida Legislature enacted s. 14.29, F.S., creating the Florida Commission on Community Service (Commission). The Commission is assigned to the Executive Office of Governor, but independently exercises its responsibilities under s. 14.29, F.S., and under the National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993.

This bill creates an unnumbered section of the Florida Statutes that establishes the "Florida Volunteer and Community Service Act of 2001," and provides that "[i]t is the intent of the Legislature to promote the development of better communities by fostering greater civic responsibility through volunteerism and service to the community." This bill authorizes the state to establish policies and procedures to provide for funds to facilitate initiatives by public agencies, schools, private institutions, and individuals that establish and implement programs that encourage and reward volunteerism.

This bill lists initiatives and purposes for the "Florida Volunteer and Community Service Act of 2001." The list includes increasing the priority of volunteerism, encouraging local community leaders to expand volunteerism, promoting corporate citizenship, fostering the alignment of community service resources with the goals of the state, and encouraging nonprofit organizations to use volunteers. This bill also encourages the citizens of Florida to support national volunteer organizations, such as Colin Powell's America's Promise and the Alliance for Youth.

This bill amends s. 14.29, F.S., to require that the Commission, in its annual report, include its assessment of the state of volunteerism in Florida; to authorize the Commission to assist agencies, institutions, and individuals by securing assistance in the form of grants, gifts, or funds from the public or private sector; and, to provide the authority to the Commission to authorize Volunteer Florida, Inc. to assist in securing training, technical assistance, and other administrative support needed to accomplish the purpose of the "Florida Volunteer and Community Service Act of 2001."

This bill does not appear to have a fiscal impact on state or local governments.

B. PRESENT SITUATION:

In 1993, Governor Lawton Chiles signed an executive order creating the Florida Commission on Community Service, as authorized by the federal National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993. In 1994, the Florida Legislature enacted s. 14.29, F.S., creating the Florida Commission on Community Service (Commission). The Commission is assigned to the Executive Office of Governor, but independently exercises its responsibilities under s. 14.29, F.S., and under the National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993.

The Commission's mission is to strengthen communities in Florida through volunteer service, by, for example, coordinating and linking volunteer programs and community service programs throughout the state; providing training and technical assistance to volunteers and volunteer organizations in the state; and administering AmeriCorps and Learn and Serve programs in Florida. (Florida Commission on Community Service, <http://www.fccs.org/service%20programs/programsmain.htm> (2001)).

The Commission works with national service organizations as well as state organizations, and is responsible for coordinating volunteers and donations in times of disaster in Florida. The Commission is one of the 50 state offices that make up Florida SERT (State Emergency Response Team). Colin Powell's America's Promise program, the Alliance for Youth organization, Governor Jeb Bush's Mentoring Initiative and Points of Light Foundation, and the Corporation for National Service are some of the national and state programs that have joined with the Commission to encourage and support volunteerism. (Florida Commission on Community Service, <http://www.fccs.org/partnerships/partnermain.htm> (2001)).

The Commission has established a direct-support organization, authorized by ss. 14.29(9)-(15), F.S. The direct-support organization is named Volunteer Florida, Inc., a non-profit corporation which receives, holds, invests, and administers property and funds and make expenditures to or for the benefit of the program. The members of the direct-support organization's board of directors must include members of the Commission. The direct-support organization prepares an annual report that details its activities for the preceding year, compiles reports accepted on behalf of the governor, and includes specific recommendations for any necessary legislative, administrative, or regulatory reform. Id.

C. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

This bill creates an unnumbered section of the Florida Statutes that establishes the "Florida Volunteer and Community Service Act of 2001," and provides that "[i]t is the intent of the Legislature to promote the development of better communities by fostering greater civic responsibility through volunteerism and service to the community.” This bill authorizes the state to establish policies and procedures to provide for funds to facilitate initiatives by public agencies, schools, private institutions, and individuals that establish and implement programs that encourage and reward volunteerism.

This bill lists initiatives and purposes for the “Florida Volunteer and Community Service Act of 2001.” The list includes increasing the priority of volunteerism, encouraging local community leaders to expand volunteerism, promoting corporate citizenship, fostering the alignment of community service resources with the goals of the state, and encouraging nonprofit organizations to use volunteers. This bill also encourages the citizens of Florida to support national volunteer organizations, such as Colin Powell’s America’s Promise and the Alliance for Youth.

This bill amends s. 14.29, F.S., to require that the Commission, in its annual report, include its assessment of the state of volunteerism in Florida; to authorize the Commission to assist agencies, institutions, and individuals by securing assistance in the form of grants, gifts, or funds from the public or private sector; and, to provide the authority to the Commission to authorize Volunteer Florida, Inc. to assist in securing training, technical assistance, and other support to accomplish the purpose of the “Florida Volunteer and Community Service Act of 2001.”

This bill is effective upon becoming law.
