SUMMARY ANALYSIS

HB 807 deals with the private security, investigative, and recovery industries. The Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services (department) provides for licensure and regulation the private security, investigative and recovery/repossession industries. Currently, the term "repossession" is defined to include property consisting of motor vehicles, mobile homes, and motorboats. The act of repossessing these properties must be conducted by licensed recovery agents.

This legislation expands the definition of the term "repossession" to include aircraft, personal watercraft, all-terrain vehicles, farm equipment, and industrial equipment. Thus, these additional properties would be subject to the regulation.

The bill revises insurance requirements for security agencies to require commercial general liability coverage instead of comprehensive general liability.

The bill amends several sections in Chapter 493, F.S., reflecting the change in the term "repossession."

The number of individuals who are currently exempt from the licensing requirements is not known. Therefore, the amount of fiscal impact this bill will have on state government is indeterminate. There is no anticipated fiscal impact on local government.

The effective date of the bill is October 1, 2005.

FULL ANALYSIS

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. HOUSE PRINCIPLES ANALYSIS:

Provide limited government: The bill increases the universe of individuals that are required to be licensed and regulated by the department.

Ensure lower taxes: The bill subjects a new class of practitioners to statutory requirements and requires the payment of fees relating to licensure and regulation.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

The Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services (department) provides for licensure and regulation the private security, investigative and recovery/repossession industries. Currently, the term “repossession” is defined to include property consisting of motor vehicles, mobile homes, and motorboats. The act of repossessing these properties must be conducted by licensed recovery agents. Currently, 15 categories of exemptions from regulation are specified in chapter 493, F.S.

This legislation expands the definition of the term “repossession” to include aircraft, personal watercraft, all-terrain vehicles, farm equipment, and industrial equipment. Thus, these additional properties would be subject to the regulations and guidelines set forth in chapter 493, F.S., relating to recovery/repossession practices.

One of the exemption categories specifies,

493.6102 Inapplicability of this chapter.--This chapter shall not apply to:

(3) Any individual solely, exclusively, and regularly employed as an unarmed investigator or ~~recovery agent~~ in connection with the business of her or his employer, when there exists an employer-employee relationship. [coding inserted]

This bill eliminates the reference to “recovery agent” in this exemption and, thereby, requires these employees to be licensed and regulated in accordance with this chapter.

“The bill revises insurance requirements for security agencies to require commercial general liability coverage instead of comprehensive general liability. According to the department, commercial general liability is a much more appropriate type of insurance for this type of service. Private investigators and repossessors were removed from this section because they each have their own type of coverage that is more specific to their service. For example, recovery agencies already have what is referred to as “garage-keeper’s liability” which has a much larger coverage than what is specified by statute. Upon license renewal, security agencies must submit evidence of insurance to the department. Failure by a security agency to maintain adequate commercial general liability insurance is grounds for disciplinary action.”¹

Currently, all licensed security, recovery and private investigative agencies must carry a minimum of $300,000 general comprehensive liability insurance coverage.

The bill amends several sections in Chapter 493, F.S., reflecting the change in the term “repossession.”
