I. Summary:

The bill provides that the Department of Business and Professional Regulation can renew a farm labor contractor's certificate of registration after the applicant's federal certificate of registration has expired if the applicant has timely filed for a renewal of the federal certificate. The bill also provides that the Department of Business and Professional Regulation shall suspend, revoke, or refuse to issue or renew a certificate of registration if the federal certificate is suspended, revoked, or is not issued or renewed.

The bill provides an effective date of July 1, 2010.

This bill amends section 450.31, Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

A farm labor contractor is any person who, for compensation, recruits, transports, supplies, or hires one or more farm workers to work for, or under the direction, supervision, or control of a third person, or directs, supervises, or controls the work.¹

In order to engage in farm labor contracting, the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act of 1983 requires a farm labor contractor to obtain a federal certificate of registration from the United States Department of Labor.² Registration is required regardless of whether additional state licensing or registration is required under state law.³ The federal certificate of registration expires twelve months after issuance.⁴ However, a certificate can be extended by filing an application for renewal at least 30 days prior to expiration.⁵ Under federal law, the farm labor contractor maintains the authority to operate, as if operating under a valid certificate, until the renewal application has been processed.⁶

In addition to the federal certificate, Florida requires state registration. Section 450.30, F.S., requires farm labor contractors to obtain a state certificate of registration from the Department of Business and Professional Regulation (department). Under current law, a farm labor contractor will not be issued a state certificate of registration without obtaining and holding a valid federal certificate of registration.⁷ A state certificate of registration will not be renewed unless the contractor holds a valid federal certificate.⁸

Under current law, a farm labor contractor is authorized to work after the expiration of his or her federal certificate if the contractor timely applies to renew the federal certificate of registration. However, the department cannot renew the state certificate until the federal registration has been officially renewed. As a result, a farm labor contractor may be unable to work in the state while waiting on the federal renewal application to be fully processed.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill amends s. 450.31, F.S., to permit the renewal of a state certificate of registration for farm labor contractors whose federal certificates have expired so long as the applicant for renewal has timely filed a federal certificate renewal. The bill also requires the department to suspend, revoke, or refuse to renew certificates of registration if the federal certificate is suspended, revoked, or is not renewed.

The bill provides an effective date of July 1, 2010.
