FULL ANALYSIS

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Background

Community Association Managers (CAMs) are licensed by the Department of Business and Professional Regulation (DBPR) to perform community association management functions.¹ The statutes define community association management as “practices requiring substantial specialized knowledge, judgment, and managerial skill. . . .”² Duties include controlling or disbursing funds, preparing budgets and other financial documents, assisting in noticing or conducting meetings, and coordinating maintenance and other services.³

CAMs are regulated by the seven-member Regulatory Council of Community Association Managers. Five of the members must be licensed CAMs, one of whom must be a CAM for a timeshare. The other two must not be CAMs. Members are appointed to 4-year terms by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate.⁴

Prospective CAMs must apply to DBPR to take the licensure examination and submit to a background check. Upon determination that the applicant is of good moral character, the applicant must attend Department-approved in-person training prior to taking the exam.⁵ CAMs are then required to complete continuing education hours as approved by the Council.⁶

The Florida Bar has a Standing Committee that focuses on the unlicensed practice of law. The Unlicensed Practice of Law Standing Committee (Standing Committee) held hearings in 1995 to determine if CAMs were crossing the line into the unlicensed practice of law in performing their statutory responsibilities. On certain matters, the Standing Committee determined that the CAMs were not performing legal work. Those activities included drafting meeting notices, writing board- and annual-meeting agendas, and filling out certain forms. However, the standing committee determined that several other duties commonly performed by CAMs did constitute the unlicensed practice of law, such as drafting lien forms and other certain forms, determining the timing and method of meeting notices, determining the votes necessary for certain actions, and advising a community association about laws or rules. The Standing Committee determined some other actions may or may not involve the unlicensed practice of law, depending on the circumstances.⁷ The Standing Committee provided an advisory opinion to the Supreme Court for consideration. The Supreme Court adopted the Standing Committee’s recommendations the following year.⁸

On May 13, 2013, the Standing Committee proposed a subsequent advisory opinion to clarify the Court’s earlier opinion regarding CAMs. The proposed advisory opinion requested that the 1996 Court opinion remain in effect, but also requested that the Court consider other common practices by CAMs that were not fully addressed in the 1996 opinion. Specifically, the Standing Committee proposed advisory opinion suggests that the following should constitute the unlicensed practice of law:

- Drafting amendments to declaration of covenants, bylaws, and articles of incorporation when such documents are to be voted upon by the members;
- Determining the number of days to be provided for statutory notice;
- Modifying limited proxy forms promulgated by the state if there is any discretion involved;

- Preparing documents concerning the right of the association to approve new prospective owners;
- Determining the votes needed to pass a proposition or amendment to recorded documents;
- Determining the number of owners' votes needed to establish a quorum;
- Preparing construction lien documents;
- Preparing, reviewing, drafting, and/or substantial involvement in the preparation/execution of contracts, including construction contracts, management contracts, cable television contracts, etc.;
- Determining who is the owner of a property that is to receive a statutory pre-lien letter; and
- Any activity that requires statutory or case law analysis to reach a legal conclusion.⁹

The Florida Supreme Court has not issued an opinion regarding the Standing Committee's proposed advisory opinion.

Since 1950, through case law and advisory opinions, the Court has continued to define the boundaries of the unlicensed practice of law. There is no rule or test to determine whether an activity is considered to be the practice of law.¹⁰ However, if an activity is within a profession's "sphere of activity," it is more likely that the Court will allow a non-lawyer to perform the activity, even if the activity involves drafting a legal instrument.¹¹ Furthermore, the less discretion that is involved, the more likely that a non-lawyer will be allowed to perform the activity, such as if there is a form so that the professional is merely filling in factual information such as names, addresses, figures, etc.¹²

Effect of the Bill

The bill amends s. 468.431(2), F.S., to add responsibilities to the definition of a CAM:

- Determining the number of days required for statutory notices;
- Determining the amounts due the association;
- Collecting amounts due to the association before filing a civil action;
- Calculating the votes required for a quorum or to approve a proposition or amendment;
- Completing forms related to the management of a community association that have been created by statute or by a state agency;
- Drafting letters of intended action;
- Drafting meeting notices and agendas;
- Calculating and preparing certificates of assessment;
- Responding to requests for a certificate of assessment;
- Negotiating monetary or performance terms of a contract subject to approval by an association;
- Drafting prearbitration demands;
- Preparing statutory construction lien documents for association projects;
- Coordinating or performing maintenance for real or personal property and other routine services involved in the operation of a community association; and
- Complying with the association's governing documents and the requirements of law as necessary to perform such practices.

Ass'n Managers*, 681 So. 2d 1119, 1123 (Fla. 1996) (stating that it is generally understood that "performance of services in representing another before the courts is the practice of law," and that "the giving of legal advice and counsel to others" is likely the unlicensed practice of law, even though "such matters may not then or ever be the subject of proceedings in a court").
