SUMMARY ANALYSIS

A marriage license is required to be married in Florida. Among other requirements for issuance, a couple seeking a marriage license must certify that they have read the Family Law Handbook prepared by the Family Law Section of The Florida Bar. The handbook outlines the legal rights and responsibilities of marital partners to each other and to their children. Florida law also incentivizes, but not does require, completion of a premarital preparation course by reducing the marriage license fee and waiving a three-day waiting period for couples who complete the course.

CS/HB 319 creates the Florida Healthy Marriage Handbook and provides the handbook's required language. The handbook contains resources, information, and website links to assist in the forming and maintaining a long-term marital relationship. The handbook contains information on conflict management, communication skills, financial responsibilities, and parenting responsibilities. The Florida Healthy Marriage Handbook supplements the Family Law Handbook. As a prerequisite to obtaining a marriage license, applicants must verify that they have read or otherwise accessed the Family Law Handbook and the Family Health Marriage Handbook or an alternative electronic presentation of information contained in the handbooks.

Each clerk of courts is required to make the guide available on its website and to make printed copies available to marriage license applicants if printed copies have been furnished to the clerk. Further, the clerk is encouraged to provide a list of course providers and sites where marriage and relationship skill-building classes are available.

The bill does not have a fiscal impact on state or local governments.

The bill provides an effective date of July 1, 2020.

FULL ANALYSIS

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Background

A marriage license issued by a county court judge or the clerk of the circuit court is required in order to be married in Florida.¹ To be married, the parties must:

- Be at least 18 years old, subject to some exceptions;²
- Provide their social security number or other identification;³
- Obtain and read or otherwise access Florida's family law handbook;⁴
- Provide a written statement verifying that they have completed a premarital preparation course;⁵
- Pay the required fees;⁶
- Complete an application, required affidavits, and statements;⁷ and
- Appear before the clerk or judge in person.⁸

Reading Florida's family law handbook is a prerequisite to receiving a marriage license.⁹ The Family Law Section of The Florida Bar created the family law handbook, which covers the legal rights and responsibilities of marital partners to each other and to their children, both during a marriage and upon dissolution.¹⁰ The Family Court Steering Committee and Florida Supreme Court reviews the handbook for accuracy prior to publication and distribution.¹¹ The clerk of court must make the handbook available upon application for a marriage license and may also make it available through electronic means or on videotape.¹² The book is 16 half-pages long and covers:

- Economic issues during marriage and upon the dissolution of marriage, including assets, liabilities, and how the court divides assets and liabilities upon divorce; alimony; and rights to assets upon the death of a spouse;
- Child-related issues, including paying for children's expenses after divorce; making decisions for the children after divorce; where the children will live after divorce; contact with children; and step-parenting;
- Domestic violence and child abuse;
- The process for ending a marriage; and
- Community resources.¹³

Although a couple is not required to complete a premarital preparation course, doing so reduces the marriage license fees and allows a couple to bypass a three-day waiting period.¹⁴

There were 156,168 marriages in Florida in calendar year 2018, and 77,054 dissolutions.¹⁵ Both the marriage rate and the rate of dissolution have remained relatively constant in Florida over the past
