Assistive technology is any device, item, gadget, tool, hardware, or software used to increase, maintain, or improve the functional capabilities of both individuals of all ages who have disabilities and older adults who may find a need for assistance. ## Federal Law

In 2004, the Assistive Technology Act of 1998 was amended by the Assistive Technology Act of 2004 (Act), to recognize the substantial progress that had been made in the development of assistive technology devices that benefit individuals with disabilities.<sup>2</sup> The Act required the Secretary of Education to support state grant programs that assist states in undertaking activities for maintaining and strengthening a permanent comprehensive statewide program of technology related assistance, for individuals with disabilities of all ages.<sup>3</sup> In addition, the Act required states to establish advisory councils for the purpose of consumer-response and consumer-driven advice to the state for planning of the implementation and evaluation of activities carried out through the grants made available by the act.<sup>4</sup>

The state implemented advisory council must be comprised of the following members:<sup>5</sup>

- Individuals with disabilities that use assistive technology or the family members or guardians of the individuals;
- A representative of a state center for Independent living;
- A representative of the state workforce development board established under section 101 of the Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act;
- A representative of the State educational agency;
- Representatives of other state agencies, public agencies, or private organizations, as determined by the state.

Further, states are required to ensure a majority, not less than 51 percent, of the members of the advisory council, are members appointed as individuals with disabilities or family members or guardians of individuals with disabilities that use assistive technology.<sup>6</sup> The council must also be geographically representative of the state and reflect the diversity of the state.<sup>7</sup>

Florida Law

The Assistive Technology Advisory Council (Council) is responsible for ensuring consumer involvement in the creation, application, and distribution of technology-related assistance to and for persons who have disabilities.<sup>8</sup> The Council acts as the board of directors and provides direction, through a not-for-profit corporation created by the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) of the Department of Education, to Florida's Alliance for Assistive Services and Technology.<sup>9</sup>

The Council may not exceed 27 members at any one time. The Council must be composed of the following members:<sup>10</sup> independent living, rather than from the Florida Independent Living Council. The bill also provides that a representative from another state agency that provides or coordinates services for persons with disabilities can be added to the Council if requested by a majority vote of the Council members, that representative must be appointed by the head of the corresponding state agency. Finally, the bill removes the requirement that Council membership cannot exceed 27 members.

The bill further aligns the Council membership with federal requirements that members of the Council be geographically representative of the state, reflective of the diversity of the state's population with respect to race, ethnicity, age, gender, type of disability, and type of disability-related services and devices received. The bill directs the Council to elect a single chair of the council. The bill maintains the limit of two consecutive terms for members, but revises the number of years a council member must be retired from the Council after two terms to be reappointed, from one year to three years.

The bill deletes the requirement that Council members form a technology awareness committee and a public policy and advocacy committee. The bill removes the interagency committee, assigning the duties of the committee to the members representing state agencies. The bill also allows Council members to participate in fundraising activities on behalf of the Council, which could lead to additional funding for the Council.

The bill takes effect on July 1, 2022.
